JOURNEY THROUGH
EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA
ALONG A HISTORIC
165-MILE TRAIL.

Stepping on the D&L Trail is like going back in time. You're walking on the backbone of what was once a vital transportation network of canals and railroads for shipping coal from mines in Northeast Pennsylvania to markets in Philadelphia and beyond. This network kickstarted America's transformation into an industrial powerhouse.

In fact, the Delaware & Lehigh National Heritage Corridor (D&L) was so crucial to the country's history that the United States Congress designated it a National Heritage Area (NHA) in 1988. An NHA recognizes historically, culturally and environmentally significant areas. All of the D&L's canals, towpaths, railroad tracks, right-of-ways, natural resources and cultural assets are combined to create a sense of place like nowhere else.

Today, the D&L Trail is owned by various parties and managed by voluntary partnerships. But it really belongs to all of us. It's part of our national heritage, a 165-mile-long ribbon of history connecting Wilkes-
